

Public School System

Pickaway County, Ohio

David L. Beavers

Early Education

The roots of education in Pickaway Township extend as far back as 1785. The Northwest Survey Ordinance of 1785 dealt with the surveying of the land north of the Ohio River and west of the Allegheny Mountains and provided that Section 16 in each township from this survey be used to support the public schools within the township. Each township consisted of thirty-six sections, each section being one square mile in area. In Pickaway County, land east of the Scioto River was surveyed in this manner.

The Continental Congress passed another ordinance to enable the 1785 Ordinance to be implemented. The Northwest Ordinance of 1787 made provision for the division of the territory into states with a guarantee of religious freedom and civil liberty. Slavery was prohibited and education and morality were encouraged. This ordinance provided a school endowment of 704,000 acres of land in Ohio alone.

After becoming a state in 1803, the Ohio Legislature became the agent to carry out the intent of the federal government. Ohio was the first state to use this program to support education. Unfortunately, the program did not work very well because of the restrictions and obligations placed on the land leasers. Changes were eventually made in this program.

Three trustees and a treasurer were elected by the township to lease the land and collect the rent. This revenue was given to the education fund for schools. The 1817 Ohio Legislature granted a 99-year lease, renewable forever with an appraisal to be made every 33 years and the rent fixed at 6% of the appraised value. As history was to reveal, this legislation did not work as planned.

The Congress of 1826 allowed for the lands to be released and sold. The early settlers soon learned that the school land in Section 16 could be obtained at a cost far below the current market price charged for other lands by the United States Land Office. However, the price for the school land was firm and full payment in cash was required on the date of purchase. This was a hardship for some settlers.

The early schools were closely associated with the church since parents wanted their children to learn to read the Bible. When the early settlers wanted their children to learn to read, write, or learn arithmetic, the parents had to either teach them at home or have the ministers conduct classes in their churches or homes.

Some parents felt that their children were needed to work at home and learn the family trade, not book learning. These settlers were more concerned with survival and making a living from the land. Therefore, there were arguments both for and against formal education. These same arguments were held throughout early Ohio communities.

These early log schools were of primitive construction with puncheon floors or dirt floors. The windows were covered with greased paper to let in light. Lard was rubbed into the paper to make it more transparent. The door was made of clapboards, rough boards which were hung on wooden hinges. Pulling a string that lifted the latch on the inside opened it. Tardy students who found no string outside knew that the teacher was conducting morning prayers and had to wait silently outside until the latchstring appeared.

An example of a log school

A fireplace with a stick and mud chimney and benches of split logs made up the furnishings of the school. There were no single desks in these early classrooms. The benches upon which the students sat had no support for their backs but were only slabs on rude legs. The smaller children's feet were too short to touch the floor. Other slabs along the walls, supported on pins fixed at a proper slope in the logs beneath the windows were the convenient writing benches for that day. Several students spent the day facing the wall.

The classroom environment was very uncomfortable for the children, especially since they had to sit still for many hours. In winter, they huddled together in order to keep warm. The children close to the fireplace were too hot, and those farthest away were cold. Even in the later schools, heating was a problem with the coal burning stoves. Sometimes it was so cold in the school that the homemade ink froze in the inkwells and the lunches brought from home were also frozen.

A teacher taught for twelve weeks at a rate of a dollar or two for each pupil per term. Often the tuition was paid in wheat at fifty cents per bushel and the balance in cash. At this rate a teacher could earn between twenty and forty dollars a term. Free public education had not yet come to Ohio. Those early settlers who could not afford the tuition did not send their children to school. Compulsory attendance laws were not passed in Ohio until much later.

Because the students in the classes ranged in age from five to twenty-one years of age, the teacher had a hard job not to bore the students with the same lessons over and over. The teacher had to teach all subjects at the different levels. Some students would fall asleep while waiting for the teacher to get to their level. Most of the instruction was devoted to reciting and memorizing, not a very exciting way to learn.

Teachers had to deal with many of the same discipline problems faced by teachers today. Since some teachers were as young as eighteen, some of the students were older than the teacher. These older students sometimes were discipline problems and harassed the teachers. Many a boy was punished for dipping a girl's pigtail or braid into the inkwell.

Discipline was sometimes harsh since most teachers used a leather strap or a hickory stick to punish students. "Taught to the tune of a hickory stick" was reality in those early schools. Others were made to stand in a corner, wore a dunce cap, balanced themselves on a block of wood that rested on a small round log, or wore signs tied around their necks describing their misdeed. Parents seldom complained or criticized the teachers for the punishments meted out. This was before parents knew they could sue the schools for cruel and unusual punishment or for denying certain rights.

Since paper was very scarce on the frontier and quite expensive, most lessons were written on a small slate board that each student carried to and from school each day. The teacher used a large slate at the front of the room. In the age of computers, teachers today use whiteboards and smart boards along with a lot of technology that someday will be as outmoded as the blackboard.

Textbooks brought from Pennsylvania and the Atlantic Seaboard States were used in these early schools. This collection of textbooks included Murray's English Reader with Introduction, Columbian Orator, American Preceptor, Testaments, old almanacs, Dillworth's Speller and Webster's Easy Standard of Pronunciation. Pike's Arithmetic was the universal favorite. If a teacher was unable to perform the "Rule of Three," he/she lost the respect of both the pupils and the parents.

Those who sought education for their children were satisfied when their progenies could write simple sentences, could read the Bible or an almanac, and when they could understand the mysterious computations of numbers as to be able to determine the value of a load of farm produce. The early settlers considered this crude instruction sufficient since they lived in an agrarian society. Any more education than this was regarded as dangerous since many felt that education made boys lazy and tricky.

It was also a popular belief that girls who could read and write were apt to fall easy prey to an unscrupulous suitor who might entrap these young ladies by exchanging love letters which an illiterate mother would be unable to decipher. Thus, many girls failed to learn to write. Several of the children's parents could only sign their names with an "X" and were unable to read.

Teachers were also held in a strange light. Many felt that teachers taught only because they were not capable of doing manual labor. This myth has carried over into the present day as evidenced in the saying, "Those who can't, teach." To be a good teacher requires many skills, hard work, and dedication to service. All should consider teaching as one of the best vocations that anyone could pursue.

With the passage of the Ohio School Law of 1835, free public education had its inception. School funds were now derived from the State School Tax, creating a new state fund of $200,000. Also, money was still available from township school lands and from interest on the proceeds of section 16 land sales in each township. Local school authorities could also levy a tax on real estate to secure school funds.

The townships were divided into school districts that same year. Schools were to be located near the center of each of the sections in each district so that students would not have to walk more than 1.5 miles to school.

Each of these districts had three school directors who hired the teachers and were responsible for promoting education in their district. These directors were elected for one-year terms. Beginning in 1842, they were elected to three-year terms. It was often very difficult to get people to serve on this board. Men were reported to have walked for miles and visited many homes to find a successor to fill a vacancy before someone would agree to serve.

In 1853, a law put the authority into the hands of a township board of education that hired the six teachers and a district superintendent. One director from each district made up the six-man board of the township. The law of 1853 failed to abolish the former district directors, so confusion in jurisdiction lasted until 1890 when the township board was given full authority.

The one-room schools that followed the log schools were usually made of wood until after 1850 when the first red brick schools were built. The one-room schoolhouses were equipped with stoves, slate blackboards, recitation benches and desks, some double in size. Some of the schools were very overcrowded.

Teachers had to be at least eighteen years old during this era and had to know more than the pupils. To ensure this, the teachers had to pass an examination at the county seat. The county hired examiners to administer these tests. The examiners of the common schools were appointed on a yearly basis and were responsible for giving an examination to every person wishing to be employed as a teacher. If the person passed the test and had good moral character, a teaching certificate was issued. The examiner visited the schools and gave advice relative to discipline, mode of instruction, and management of the schools. The tests that the teachers took were very difficult. Many teachers today with a college education would find these tests difficult to pass. Each January the questions used that year appeared in the local newspapers. Thus, the parents knew what type of educational background was expected of the teachers. Today's teachers must pass a national teacher exam in order to be licensed to teach.

The wages for these early teachers averaged $33.50 per month for the spring and summer terms and $40.00 a month for the longer winter term. It appears that teachers have always been underpaid and overworked.

Prior to the Civil War, there were no compulsory attendance laws. In 1877, children between the ages of eight and fourteen were obligated under state law to attend a minimum of twelve weeks of instruction during each school year. However, this law permitted many exceptions and was thus largely ineffective. In 1890, the Ohio General Assembly made it compulsory for children between the ages of eight and sixteen to attend not less than sixteen weeks of school each year unless excused for some specific reason which was indicated in the law.

On April 15, 1889, a state law required that a truant officer be hired in each township.

The school year consisted of a winter term of six months and a spring term of three months. The summer term was also three months and was usually not taught by the regular teacher. School was in session year-round during the first hundred years of education in the township. Opening day for the students occurred during the first week in September, but the older boys did not have to report until the middle of October. They were needed on the farms to cut and husk corn and to sow wheat. Very few older children attended the spring term because they were needed at home. These students usually made up the work during the summer term.

The parents were required to purchase the textbooks and supplies. Since twenty years before the Civil War, the popular textbooks in the township included the McGuffey Readers and Ray's Arithmetic. These books were to be in continual use for several years. In 1888, the schools in the district were using the following textbooks: The McGuffey Spellers and Revised Readers, Bedpath History, Ray's Arithmetic, Harvey's Grammar and Electric Geography. Textbooks were re-evaluated every three years by the school directors.

On May 4, 1891, the Ohio School Textbook Law was passed and the same textbooks had to be purchased for the entire township. The cost of the most popular textbooks of the time were McGuffey Revised Electric Readers from a cost of 13 cents for book one to 64 cents for book six, The McGuffey Electric Spelling Book for 13 cents each, Ray's New Primary Arithmetic at 11 cents, Ray's New Practical Arithmetic at 38 cents, Ray's New Higher Arithmetic at 64 cents, Ray's New Elementary Algebra for 60 cents, Harvey's Elementary Grammar and Composition for 32 cents, Harvey's Revised English Grammar for 49 cents, The Electric Elementary Geography for 41 cents, The Electric Complete Ohio Geography for 90 cents, The Electric Primary United States History for 38 cents each, The New Electric United States History for 75 cents, Electric Physical Geography for 75 cents, and Hutchinson's Physiology and Hygiene at 84 cents each.

Starting in 1915, the school could only purchase textbooks that were adopted by the County Board of Education. Every five years textbooks had to be re-evaluated.

The schools of the township will be long remembered for the great service they rendered to education and the children who attended these schools. Many of these children became outstanding prominent adults who contributed greatly to the improvement of our society. Even with the lack of supplies, equipment and time, the little red schoolhouses provided the opportunity for much to be accomplished in the way of education. The era of the red schoolhouses has passed into history leaving behind only memories of days gone by and a rich heritage for schools of the future. The schools served their purpose well and it is up to the new generation to continue on the excellence in education that began with the one-room schools.

Pickaway Township Schools

The first schools in the township were held in log cabins and were supported by private subscriptions. According to Van Cleaf's history of the county, Jesse Bartlett was one of the pioneer teachers from New England. Van Cleaf states that the Rawl school house near Congo Creek was probably the first one built, and classes were taught by Hugh Hannagan. The first log meeting-house built at Salem (Meade) in 1802 or 1803 was also used as a school. David Jones taught at this school.

The following article appeared in the August 13, 1935, Circleville Herald. "The first country school established in Pickaway County was probably in sub-district No. 1 in Pickaway Township and located about six miles southeast of Circleville. A subscription paper stating the object and giving the of subscribers is as follows: "We, the subscribers, citizens in the vicinity of Scippo Liberty school land, do hereby promise and agree to pay, or cause to be paid, unto Jonathan Craig, Richardson Cade and Andrew Kinnear, Jr., or either of them, or their successors, the sum annexed to our respective names on or before the first of May, next, for the special purpose of building a schoolhouse on said premises, and also to enclose a part thereof as a graveyard, which when free shall be free to all sects as a place of worship and to bury their dead in, providing the same don't clash with the school.

"Any of the subscribers to have the privilege to work out a part or the whole sum by them subscribed at ordinary wages. In witness we have subscribed our names in the months of January and February, A. D. 1815. David Kinnear, for the land, $7.32. Michael Earnest, $4.50. Francis Kinnear, 75¢. Richardson Cade, $4.50. Andrew Kinnear, Jr., $4.50, William Cade, 75¢. Jonathan Craig, $4.50. John Craig, $4.50. Hugh Craig, $4.50. Samuel Dresbach, $2.00. James Metzger, $1.00. James Reed, $1.00. William Davis, $1.00. Peter Apple, $4.00. Daniel Dresbach, $2.00 and Johnson Hunter, $1.00.

"So it may be said that the above men were pioneers in Pickaway County education. Their spirit and sacrifice made possible the creation of the first log schoolhouse in the county. This primitive temple of learning was erected in February, 1815. It was a substantial and comfortable hewed log house, about 20x25 feet and perhaps 15 feet to the top of the square, with a large open fireplace, black chimney and an oak shingle roof.

For many years within this log house the schoolmaster with an occasional schoolmistress gave the customary instructions in 'readin,' 'ritin' and 'rithmetic' to the youths of the neighborhood.

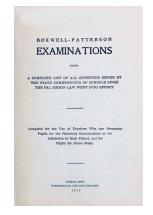

In 1852 this old log school was torn down to make way for a more pretentious frame building and the old logs and the other material were taken to Meade, three miles southwest, where it was again put up and improved and used as a dwelling for many years."

Pickaway Township was divided into nine school districts. The nine districts with red brick schools were Rice, school #1 and located on Zane Trail Road; Ebenezer, school #2 and occupied the spot where the township house is now located; Hitler or Ludwig, school #3 on Tarlton Road; Jefferson, school #4 and was on Route 23 in the Jefferson Addition; Davenport or Emmett, school #5 on River Road; Congo or Wolfe, school #6 on Wolfe Road; Salem, school #7 on the Hayesville-Adelphi Road at Meade; Boggs, school #8 on Route 361 and Kingston Pike; and Warren or Oak Grove, school #9 on the Hayesville-Adelphi Road and Pickaway-Salt Creek Township line. The Meade school was the largest with two rooms. M. D. Kreider and Charles Kreider taught at the Meade school in the early 1900s.

These one-room schools housed students in grades oneeight. After completing the eighth grade, students who passed the Boxwell Examination could attend high school at either Everts (Circleville) or Kingston.

In 1906 the Pickaway Township board consisted of President William Ludwig, Dennis Rader, Harry Calvert, Amos Hoffman, Charles Hall and E. C. Wilkins, clerk.

The following textbooks were adopted by the board in 1906: Progressive Course in Spelling, The Baldwin Primer, Baldwin's School Reading, Milne's Arithmetic, Ray's New Arithmetic, Harvey's New Language Lessons, Harvey's New English Grammar for Schools, Natural Geography, McMaster's History of the United States, Overton's Applied Physiology, Spencer's Practical Writing, Goff and Mayne's Agriculture, Blaisdell's First Steps with American and British Authors — revised, Peterman's Civil Government — Ohio Edition and Dryer's Lessons in Physical Geography.

By 1906 Pickaway Township had nine school houses. All were built of brick. The district known as Number Three contained the Ludwig School. It was located along Tarlton Road east of the David Ludwig farm.

Souvenirs of each school year Dresbach; Myra Weaver; George were given by the teachers to every student. One from 1895-96 showed Rose E. Morris as the teacher and David S. Ludwig as director of the school.

Students at the Ludwig School during the 1895-96 years were Lydia, Mary, Edgar, Cora, Mabel and Myrtle Ludwig; Guy

No. 5 Davenport School

by Judith Beavers

[This article was written from an interview with Gladys Rader Shepler in 1987 by Judy Beavers, an educator at Logan Elm High School. Gladys Radar Shepler, a member of the first graduating class at Pickaway, died at age 107. The school was located on River Road.]

In the not-too-distant past, thirty students attended Davenport School in Pickaway Township to learn the three R's. At the turn of the century the one-room brick school was located on River Road close to the place where Pickaway County now has its airstrip. It was typical of the schools of the era and one of nine in Pickaway Township alone.

The bell on the school roof used to ring out a resonant reminder for the children to hurry to school on time, promptly at 9 a.m. The children were expected to walk whatever distance necessary to reach the school. Sometimes in the wintertime when the snow was high enough to make walking a mile or more difficult for little legs, a kind father might hitch the horse to the flatbed farm wagon and provide transportation to school for his children and his neighbor's.

Inside the building, students found their places among four rows of wooden desks and nervously awaited their turns at the recitation bench in front of the teacher's desk. Four tall windows on either side of the room admitted ample light for the children to do their studies. At the front, the teacher on the raised platform beside the desk waited expectantly as her little and not-so-little charges seated themselves.

The teacher at the Davenport School provided instruction for eight grades and the children could begin at any time, but usually were five or six years of age. They finished with the elementary curriculum when they mastered the studies given, no matter what their ages happened to be. In a farming community, it was not unusual for the older boys to get only three to four months of formal education during a school year in order to help at home on the farm during the harvesting and the planting seasons.

Two features of the one-room school curriculum would be particularly appealing to children today. There was no homework assigned and there were no graded weekly quizzes and tests as such. Once a group of children finished with the recitation of their day's lesson, the teacher graded each child on his participation in the lesson that day and sent the students back to their desks to prepare for the next day. As a former student in a oneroom school observed, students were almost certain to master their lessons because in the course of eight years they would hear each of the lessons as often as eight times.

The one-room school provided all the amenities of life. Children who needed a drink were sent to the cloakroom to get one from the pail and the community dipper kept there. The older boys usually considered it a privilege to be allowed to pump the water for the pail daily. For rest room breaks the teacher would dispatch the students to either end of a building containing outhouses and a coal shed just down the hill from the school.

Students never complained about the school lunches, because each child brought his own lunch to school with him in a bucket. Furthermore, the school's central heating and cooling system always provided a comfortable setting for the students. During the warm months, air condition was provided by opening the windows, and in the winter a coal-burning potbellied stove provided all the warmth needed. To sit near the central stove was not necessarily always an advantage, because sometimes the prankish older boys would make the fire too hot, much to everyone's discomfort. For those miscreants, Davenport had its customary dunce's stool in the corner, and the teacher had a continuous supply of switches from the trees outside to keep the students in line.

As it is today, very often the children's favorite part of the day was recess. In the winter they played fox and geese when they could make the circular paths to play the game in the snow. In fair weather there was tag, marbles, and baseball. If one of the children had brought his pocketknife, they could play mumblety-peg, a game in which the knife is tossed from various positions so that the blade sticks into the earth with the handle up.

Often the schoolhouse was the center of several community social events. Spelling Bees were contests held between schools. At box socials, suppers were prepared and carefully packed into beribboned boxes to be auctioned to the highest bidder. The proceeds were used to provide materials for the school's operation. At Christmas the children took part in entertainments at the school. Sheets on a wire across the front of the room were the curtains, while the teacher's platform became the stage for the production.

Once the students of Davenport School and throughout

Although this picture was taken inside the one-room school at Washington Township District No. 4, it is similar to the Davenport School Christmas Entertainment described by Mrs. Gladys Rader Shepler.

Pickaway County had mastered the three R's according to their teachers' expectations, the county superintendent would administer the Boxwell Examination to certify that the students who so desired were ready to continue their education at Everts Building on South Court Street, which was the site of Circleville High School.

But even in the early 1900s the one-room school was fast becoming a relic of the past, because in 1913 the nine schools in Pickaway Township were consolidated to form Pickaway Township Centralized School. Its first graduating class in 1916 boasted two students, Ruth Rice and Gladys Rader.

This agreement was entered into by residents of Pickaway Township to provide a school for their children. The school has long ago disappeared and no trace of it is left. It was located on what is now known as Wolf Road, which runs south to the Ross County line at the location of Logan Elm State Park.

No photos has been found for this school. Congo or Wolfe School was located on Wolfe Road.

No. 8 Boggs School

Above is a photo of students who attended Boggs School during the 1912-13 school year. The teacher is Samuel Lindsey. The school was located at the intersection of Kingston Pike and State Route 361.

No. 9 Warren or Oak Grove School

This school district included the southwest section of Salt Creek Township and the southeast section of Pickaway Township. It was originally a log structure built to be used both as a school and also by the M. E. Church around 1859. The building was taken down and replaced with a two-room brick school building erected on the same location, as shown above. This brick school was built up to the standards of the late 1800s complete with a belfry and a coal cellar.

The school was a joint effort of the Pickaway Township and Salt Creek Township school directors. The students of Salt Creek Township who attended this school came from the area between the school and the imaginary line north from Prairie View Cemetery to the Heffner Road and south to the County Line Road, which was a crude mud trail at that time.

Both townships used the building until they both consolidated their one-room schools into a centralized system. The Pickaway Township Centralized School was built in 1912. The Salt Creek Township boys and girls attended the Whisler School until the Salt Creek Township Centralized School was built in 1916. The Oak Grove School building stood on the northwest corner of the intersection of Hayesville-Adelphi Road and the Salt Creek-Pickaway Township line road, west of Whisler, and on land owned by George and Carolyn Minshall. It has since been torn down.

This land was deeded to the Pickaway Township school directors in 1851 by Josiah Francis, recorded in Volume 25, page 531, Pickaway County, Ohio.

Pickaway Township Centralized School

The history of the centralized Pickaway Township school began with the consolidation of the nine one-room schools in the township. This was during the time that the consolidation of schools was in its infancy. A board of education was established to consider centralization. At the May 8, 1911, board meeting, it was decided to hold a special election on June 12, 1911, to see if the voters would approve the combining of the one-room schools. At that election, the voters approved the proposal by a 140-123 vote. At that time, Henry R. Calvert was president of the board, and the other members were Dennis E. Phillips, T. E. Ross and C. A. Dresbach. The clerk was C. E. Wilkins. During the September 4, 1911, board meeting, the board resolved to secure land and money for the purpose of centralization. The board estimated the cost to be $30,000.

There was a special board meeting held on January 8, 1912, to select a site for the school. At this time, there had been some changes on the board. Willis Ludwig was now board president, and the other members were Henry R. Calvert, Dennis E. Phillips, Burr H. Rader, and Isaac

E. Morris. The first choice of the board members was the Ruggles Farm with the second choice being the Dreisbach Farm. Five acres in the Ruggles woods was selected. However, the Ruggles heirs refused to sell, and the board had to acquire the property through eminent domain.

Early in 1912, the board met to decide what type of building to build and who would build it. The board now consisted of Burr H. Rader as president, Dennis E. Phillips, Henry R. Calvert, Isaac E. Morris, John Penn, and Leo McKenzie as clerk.

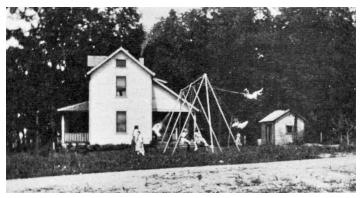

On September 14, 1913, the school opened its doors and 196 students entered the newly constructed school.

Plaque on School Building

Horse-drawn wagons were originally used to bring the students to school. In the school wagons at that time, seats were obtained by means of a pecking order. The older, larger students would sit in seats near the center of the wagon. These were the most desired seats on the wagon, especially during the winter months. The coal oil heater was located in the center of the wagon and those sitting next to the heater benefited from the heat given off while the rest of the students were cold. By 1930, the horse-drawn wagons were replaced by motor-driven buses.

The school janitor lived in a house next to the school. This house was built from funds allocated by the school board. John Stout was the first janitor and continued in that position until 1918. He was succeeded by Lewis Smith until 1936. In that year Lee A. Smith took over that position. Several custodians have followed over the years. Lawrence McKenzie served for many years.

Custodian's House with school children on the school playground swings during recess.

Due to an increase in enrollment, there was a need for additional space to house the growing high school. In 1927, an addition was built behind the 1913 building and the two buildings were connected by a long hallway. By this time the total enrollment was around 300.

Before the centralized school was built, if a student wanted to attend high school, he or she had to travel to Kingston or Circleville since there were no high schools in the township. Once the centralized school was built, more and more students decided to pursue a high school education.

Early records show that the students at Pickaway Township High School were able to get a good education. Credits were earned in subjects such as Advanced Algebra, Plane and Solid Geometry, Public Speaking, Business Law, Physiology, and Agriculture. The required classes included English, History, Physical Education and the Sciences. In addition, there were several extra-curricular activities for these early high school students. Choir, band, journalism, class plays, athletics and various clubs were some of the ways pupils could excel outside the classroom.

The yearbook was called the Pickaway Mirror and the school newspaper was the Pickaway Pamphlet. Later the school newspaper was the Pirate Blade.

Pickaway Township High School had its last graduating class in 1960. In the fall of 1960, the high school students started attending the newly built Logan Elm High School. This school was built in Pickaway Township near the intersection of Pickaway, Salt Creek and Washington Townships on property bought from Raymond Moats. This ended one chapter of the school but began another one. Pickaway Township School now housed only students from K-8.

In 1971, the George D. McDowell Junior High School was built and named in honor of a former Pickaway County Board of Education Superintendent who served from 1934-70. Thus, Pickaway Township School lost its junior high school 11 years after losing its high school. This made the building an elementary school housing grades 1-6 since the kindergarten students went to the McDowell building for a few years.

Starting with the 2012-13 school year, Pickaway became a K-4 building with the students in grades 5 and 6 being transported to the Salt Creek Intermediate School. Thus, once again the number of grade levels at the school decreased due to reorganization.

Over the past few years, voters had turned down bond levies at the polls. That would change. At the general election held on November 6, 2018, voters in the Logan Elm School District passed a bond levy. The vote total on election night from the precincts in Pickaway and Hocking counties was 3,211 in favor and 2,657 against. It passed by 554 votes.

The voters had approved building a K-12 building located just west of Logan Elm High School. Although Logan Elm High School, which opened in 1960, would be razed, McDowell Middle School would become the administrative center. The state of Ohio agreed to pay approximately 30% of the cost of construction. Local residents raised money to upgrade some areas of the new school that the state did not include in its package.

On May 24, 2023, students left Pickaway Elementary for the last time. When the last student left the building, formal education located in the township did not end like it did in the other townships. Education continues to thrive in the township since the new K-12 building is located in Pickaway Township.

Dedication of the New Pickaway School

In the December 1913 issue of The Ohio Teacher on page 201, we find the history of the dedication of the newly built Pickaway Township School. The article reads as follows:

The above is a fine picture of a fine building in Pickaway Township, Pickaway County, dedicated Oct. 31, 1913.

The dedication of this township centralized school was one of the greatest events of the kind ever given in the county and was participated in by 600 people.

The guests of honor were Frank W. Miller, state superintendent of public instruction, F. B. Pearson, high school visitor of the O.S.U., and H. P. Folsom of Circleville, all of whom made splendid addresses.

A banquet was served at noon, the tables being spread in the auditorium and playroom. Parents and pupils were assisting hostesses. It was really a basket picnic. The auditorium and playroom were beautifully decorated in flags and the high school colors, gold and black. White and pink chrysanthemums on the tables added to the decorative effect. The scene was a pretty one and one that will long be remembered by all who participated in the festivities.

Rev. George J. Troutman gave the invocation and the pupils furnished excellent music.

Professor F. B. Pearson's theme was "A Plea for higher Education as a Near Help to Humanity."

Frank W. Miller spoke on "The Opportunities of Education."

Mr. Folsom delivered the dedicatory address, in which he said: "It is not only to dedicate this school that we assemble here today, but it should be the duty of all citizens to dedicate their lives to the work of education." He referred to the donation of $5,000 given by Nelson

Hitler, one of Pickaway County's substantial citizens, as a nucleus for a library for the school. "It is a gift of this kind," said Mr. Folsom, "that helps to build up a school."

The centralized school building is a two-story buff pressed brick structure with stone trimmings. It is located on five acres of ground bought from the Ruggles estate near Hoover station on the Scioto Valley traction line.

Plaque on School Wall

It has seven recitation rooms, a teachers' room, restrooms, library, superintendent's office, and auditorium. In the basement is a playroom amply large enough to accommodate all the pupils. Toilets, lavatories, and engine room are located in the basement. The halls and rooms are fitted up with sanitary bubbling fountains; the building is heated with steam throughout. It has fine large playgrounds.

The present enrollment is 225 pupils, and they are taken to and from the school daily in ten large wagons.

The school is under the supervision of Superintendent Edwin L. Daley, who is an experienced educator. He is ably assisted by Miss Willie Lutz, principal, Miss Hannah McKenzie, teacher of grammar grade, Miss Hazel Hoffman, who teaches the intermediate grade, Miss Katherine McKenzie, teacher in the second and third grades, Miss Bessie Mowbray, primary teacher, and Miss Bertha Allen, teacher of music and drawing.

The building was erected at a total cost of $35,000. This does not include the cost of the grounds.

On the board of education are President Burr Rader, Dennis Phillips, Isaac Morris and Henry Calvert.

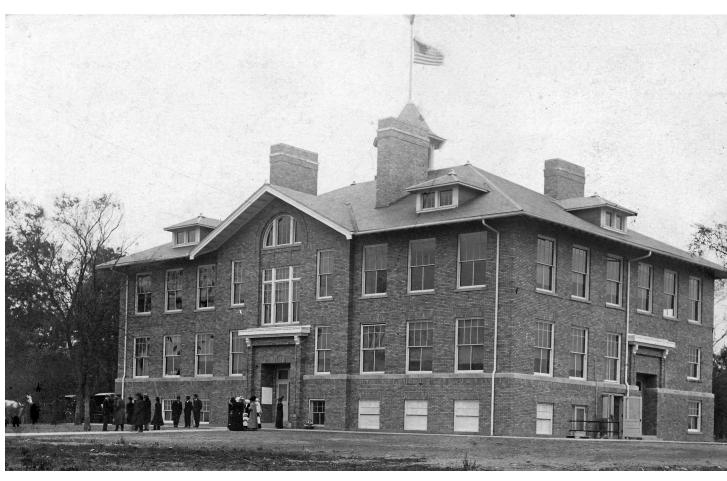

Students arrived at school on horse-drawn school wagons. Instead of parking along the road, they parked on the school lawn.

Pickaway township School in 1913

On May 8, 1911, the Pickaway Township Board of Education met to decide to centralize the nine township schools into one building. They set the public vote for June 12, 1911. The members of the board were President H. R. Calvert, D. E. Phillips, T. E. Ross, C. A. Dresbach, and C. E. Wilkins, clerk.

The results of the special election was 140 votes for centralization and 123 against.

Following the favorable vote, the board met on September 4, 1911, to secure land and money for centralization. They set the figure at $30,000. A special meeting was called on January 8, 1912, to select the school site. The board's first choice was located on the Ruggles Farm and the second choice was on the Dreisbach Farm. The board members were President Willis Ludwig, H. R. Calvert, D. E. Phillips, B. H. Rader, and J. E. Morris.

The board offered to buy five acres in Ruggles Woods. The heirs refused to sell. The board used the right of eminent domain to obtain the property.

Early in 1912 the board met to start the building process. The board members now were President B. H. Rader, D. E. Phillips, H. R. Calvert, J. E. Morris, John Penn and Leo McKenzie, clerk.

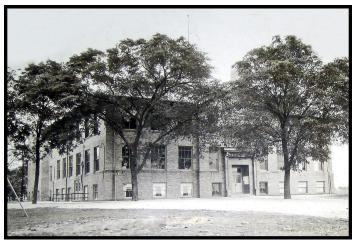

During 1912-1913, a new two-story buff pressed brick building trimmed with stone was built on the five acres in Ruggles Woods at a cost of $35,000. It consisted of seven classrooms, a teacher's room, an office, home economics and laboratory rooms, an auditorium, a library and restrooms. In the basement was the furnace to produce steam heat and an engine room. A five-room house was also built on the grounds for the custodian.

Nelson Hitler, a local farmer interested in the school, gave $5,000 to be used in the library. Some years later when he died he left in his will $104,000 for use in the library. The interest only was to be used.

In September 1913 the school opened with 196 students. On October 31, 1913, the school wad dedicated. Six hundred people gathered for the festivities including a very fine banquet.

The children first were taken to school in horse-drawn wagons which were later replaced by motorized buses in the 1930s.

Due to a fast growing enrollment, an east wing was built in 1927 at a cost of $45,000. It included additional classrooms, a cafeteria, gymnasium, agricultural shop and restrooms. The school was now on 14 acres of land.

Pickaway School in 1930

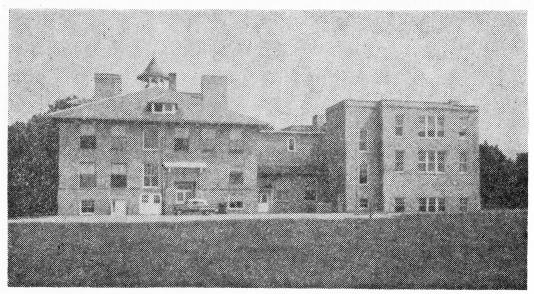

Over the years school spirit grew as the community took interest in school activities such as basketball, softball, baseball, volleyball and track, especially when Pickaway took part in the county and state tournaments. Music was an important part of the activities. There were operettas, concerts and county choruses and bands. In the 1930s and 1940s three professors from Capital University came one day each week and gave instrumental lessons to those who wished to have them. Those three were Floyd Elliott, F. R. Todhunter and Edward Morrison. That was the beginning of the school orchestra. Other activities were the Future Farmers of America and 4-H clubs.

By 1958 Pickaway Township consolidated with Salt Creek and Washington Townships to form the Logan Elm School District. Logan Elm High School opened in the fall of 1960.

Grades 1-8 continued at Pickaway until a new middle school, McDowell Exchange School, was built next to the high school in 1970. The school opened in the fall of

State of Ohio Report on Pickaway 1955

Pickaway Local School District. There are two buildings and a bus garage located on a 14 acre site in this district. The original building, a brick structure with wood interior was built in 1912. The high school building was constructed in 1927. There is a connecting passageway between the two buildings. Boys' and girls' restrooms are located on basement floors of each of these buildings. All of the elementary grade rooms are equipped with permanent type seating and fluorescent lights. The light-meter readings very closely approximated the recommended standard of 30 footcandles.

PICKAWAY SCHOOL

The elementary classrooms are somewhat larger than the rooms in some of the other school buildings. Table 3.1 shows that of the six rooms used for this purpose, the capacity of 30 sqare feet per pupil is 180 pupils. At the time of the survey 175 pupils were enrolled resulting in a utilization of 97 per cent. A study of Tables 3.2 and 3.3 indicates the room utilization of the regular high school classrooms is 75 per cent and of the special classrooms, 63 per cent.

The pupil station utilization, as indicated in Tables 3.4 and 3.5, in the regular classrooms was 52 per cent and only 30 per cent in the special classrooms.

Gladys Shepler

[The following is a speech given by Gladys Rader Shepler at the 75th anniversary of Pickaway Township School. She was a member of the first graduating class and gives information about the first year of the school.]

Early in the morning on the first Monday in September 1913 ten men, each driving two sleek, glossy, big horses hitched to a covered wagon started on a long journey. Each had a different route to follow but all were headed for the same destination, the new Pickaway Township Centralized School. As they progressed down the road, they made a stop at each house along the way picking up all children of school age and some older children who had fallen by the way but were encouraged to try again.

The wagons were enclosed by curtains that could be rolled up in pretty weather and buckled down in cold weather. There were benches parallel to the sides of the wagons that the children used for seats while in transit. In winter a small kerosene burner was placed in the center of the floor of the wagon to provide warmth for the children.

On arriving at the school all children were taken off of the wagons. They entered the school house by way of the big double front doors. Not knowing what to do or where to go, all were assembled into the auditorium to await further instructions while the ten men attended their horses. They put them in stalls in a barn built for that purpose and fed them. There they awaited the hour for their return trip home.

That assembly meeting on that Monday morning so long ago was quite different from all others that followed.

Mr. Edwin L. Dailey was the superintendent of the school at its inception. He was in charge of all activities at that point. We were assembled there, all different ages and sizes. Those who were to be the teachers were standing by, also awaiting further instructions.

Mr. Dailey was a wonderful person. He was a teacher by profession and followed that way until health problems overtook him. He was a strict disciplinarian, believing that if you spare the rod you spoil the child. However, he was loving, gentle, kind and understanding, and the children loved him.

There was a no program of any kind this first Monday morning—just the business of getting each one assigned to his or her proper place.

Mr. Dailey announced that all beginners were to go with the first grade teacher, and she very quickly gathered her group together and left the auditorium to go to their assigned home room. As each subsequent grade was given their assignment, they too were escorted by their respective home room teachers to their home rooms.

At this point all elementary students had departed the auditorium leaving only those who were eligible for High School work.

After having completed the required studies in eighth grade all pupils were required to take what was then known as the Boxwell Examination. If this test was successfully passed, the pupils were graduated and given a certificate in recognition of this achievement. They were then ready to enter High School. Since there was no High School in Pickaway Township prior to 1913, the Board of Education was obligated to pay tuition to any High School in the state of Ohio for any child who requested it. There were four students who had chosen to go to other schools—Ruth Rice and Thelma Merriman had each gone to Kingston High School while Ned Boggs and I, Gladys Rader, had chosen to go to Circleville High School. Therefore, in September 1913 the four of us were ready for the Sophomore year of work.

All those remaining were uncertain about the future but Mr. Dailey quickly put them at ease. In his quiet, fatherly manner he talked with them and admonished them that every child should have an opportunity to get a good education so he offered them that opportunity by allowing them to move right into their first ear of High School. Many of them took advantage of that opportunity and were successful but again there were those who were not.

The building was so constructed to have four class rooms, a Superintendent's office and a library on the second floor. Four class rooms and a teacher's lounge were on first floor. All restrooms, a chemistry laboratory and a room for home economics classes were on the ground level. The auditorium was off the first floor level. The library was a gift from Mr. Nelson Hitler. He was a well-to-do farmer and greatly interested in the new school and wanted the library to remain in this school.

The High School was staffed by the superintendent and two other teachers. Mr. Harry Tilton taught the science classes, Miss Willie Morris Lutz taught all English and foreign language classes while Mr. Dailey taught a lot of History—both ancient and modern. Miss Bertha Allen taught music in the grades and directed all singing in assembly. A piano was available and a high school girl usually played for assembly.

The subjects I studied were Algebra I, Algebra II, Geometry, Commercial Arithmetic, Latin I and II, German I and II, English, American Literature, English Literature, Physics, and Chemistry. All our text books were furnished. There was no such thing as a typewriter or television or any of the advantages that the children today enjoy.

During our Junior year one girls dropped out to get married and the only boy went into the service. We were actively engaged in World War One at that time. Consequently there were only two of us left to carry on. It was hard to get deeply interested with only two in the class but we pursued it to the end and were graduated on the 19th day of May 1916.

Discipline was very strict. There was no running or talking in the hallways.

There was no cafeteria so each child had to carry his own lunch. Each sat in his own desk while eating lunch.

When lunch was finished all were privileged to go outside. The big boys usually played baseball. I can remember only one side for the younger children to play on. They had other fun games such as tag, red rover, marbles, fox and geese, mumbledy-peg and many others.

This school was much too small to attempt to do any special programs at that time.

There was no dress code. Girls wore dresses that reached their ankles, high top laced shoes and their hair in a knot on their heads. Most of the boys wore sweaters and knicker-bockers—a style of short breeches, fitting loosely and gathered at the knee.

I pause now and look back and think how nice it would have been if we could have enjoyed a Jr. Sr. prom wearing a pretty long formal dress with our hair curled up around our heads awaiting a date who brought a corsage and riding in a nice shiny car.

My admonition to all children everywhere today is to make the very best of every opportunity you have, for you might need it when you go out to meet the world. This old world is nice but it can be very rough if you are not prepared to meet it.

Pickaway rededication set

By KAY SUBICH Herald Staff Writer

Sunday, October 30, Pickaway Township School, 28158 Kingston Pike, will be holding a rededication ceremony and open house in celebration of the anniversary of the school's original dedication 75 years ago.

The Pickaway Township School System was originally made up of nine, one-room schools scattered throughout Pickaway Township: Rice, Ebenezer, Hitler or Ludwig, Jefferson, Emmet, Congo or Wolfe, Salem, Boggs, and Warren or Oak Grove. Each school taught students in grades one through eight, and horse-drawn wagons were used to transport the boys and girls.

Any student who completed grade eight and passed a test known as the Boxwell Examination was eligible to attend any high school in Ohio. Most students from Pickaway Township went on to either Kingston or Circleville High School.

In a special election held in June, 1911, the township residents approved, by a vote of 140-132, the centralization of the township schools. In January, 1912 the school board selected a site for the new central school on five acres of land known as "Ruggles Woods." which was near Hoover Station on the Scioto Valley traction line. The owners of the land refused to sell, but the property was condemned and then purchased for the appraised valued.

A two-story, buff pressed brick building with stone trimmings was then built for a total cost of $35,000. The steam-heated school had seven recitation rooms, a teachers' room, rest room, library, superintendent's office and auditorium. In the basement were a playroom, toilets, lavatories, and an engine room. The janitor, Jon Stout, and his wife lived on the school grounds in a neat five-room cottage built by the school board.

In September, 1913, 196 students gathered to attend the newly-constructed Pickaway Township School. The dedication ceremony, held on October 31, 1913, was described as one of the greatest events of its kind ever given in the county. Six hundred people participated in the festivities which included a number of speakers and a fine banquet.

75th Anniversary

"OLD-TIME DAYS" OCTOBER 7, 1988

A well-to-do farmer, Nelson Hitler, at this time donated $5,000 toward the school's library, and on his death 10-15 years later, he left the school $104,000 for exclusive use by the library. His will stipulated that only the interest from the money could be used, and the principal amount is still intact today, held in trust by the Logan Elm Board of Education. Interest earned each year is used for supplies for all six libraries in the Logan Elm School District.

As the township's population increased, so did the school's enrollment, which by 1927 had reached over 300. In this year, at a cost of $45,000, a new wing was added to the building which included a cafeteria, vo-ag shop, gymnasium, and four additional classrooms.

In the fall of 1960, the new Logan Elm High School opened marking the end of Pickaway Township School as a high school. However, students through grade eight continued to attend until the McDowell Exchange School opened at the start of the 1971-72 school year. Pickaway Township School now serves grades one through six and has a current enrollment of 314 pupils.

The school has been celebrating its 75th anniversary throughout 1988. On May 25 a mock ground-breaking and tree-planting was held simulating the one that had been held in 1912. On September 14 the students launched a helium balloon in observance of the first day of classes held on the same day in 1913. October 7 was "Old-Time Day" and the students and teachers dressed, held classes, and played games as they would have done 1913. Pictured above are some of the students playing hop-scotch while dressed in the style of the early 1900's.

The school has also made a videotape which features the recollections of several former students and teachers from Pickaway Township School's early years. Included on the tape is a presentation by 90-year-old Gladys Rader Shepler who, along with Ruth Rice, were the first graduates of the school in 1918.

On October 30, the building will be open to the public from 1 to 5 p.m. with special historical displays and a program in the auditorium featuring a keynote address by Dr. Franklin Walter, State Superintendent of Public Instruction. A painting by former student Janet Nicodemus, who is now the art teacher at Logan Elm High School, commemorating the school's diamond anniversary will also be unveiled during the open house.

Students Handbook

For the use of Students of Pickaway Township High School

Pickaway Township School

CIRCLEVILLE, OHIO

PREFACE

This handbook has been prepared to serve as a source of information on problems pretaining to our school and its organization. It is primarily intended for the use of high school students, however, teachers and parents will likewise find some questions answered here.

This second edition of "Students Handbook" represents a complete revision of the previous issue. It contains information relative to opportunities afforded to the student, and regulations governing the operation of our school. We hope the suggestions contained herein will serve as incentives for better school experiences.

It is our earnest desire that students and teachers enjoy their work at Pickaway High. We hope that students will freely participate in the school activities and cooperate with teachers and the administration to make this the most successful year in the history of our school.

The author wishes to hereby express his gratitude to Mr. E. H. Althaus, who has so graciously given his time in the typing and printing of this handbook. The splendid arrangement of materials and attractiveness of this publication could not have been accomplished without his assistance.

HISTORY

revious to 1912 there were 9 one-room schools in Pickaway Township. This was the time when consolidation of schools was in its infancy. Pickaway Township, as in every other worthwhile enterprize took the lead in this undertaking. In September, 1912, 196 boys and girls, from all parts of the township gathered together. Most of the teachers in those 9 schools were retained. Mr. E. L. Dailey became the first superintendent.

To bring these boys and girls to this new building, horse drawn wagons were used. Little by little these were relieved by motor driven busses. In 1930 the Board of Education purchased a new fleet of bus bodies, which are still being used.

In 1927 an addition to the building was made. This was to serve as a high school department. At the present there is a total enrollment of approximately 300.

Seven superintendents have served Pickaway Township School. Following Mr. Dailey's tenure of office the following men served in order mentioned: W. A. Downing, Mr. Henselman, F. A. Cameron, L. E. Seitz, M. C. Warren, and the present superintendent, Myron T. Johnson.

John Stout was the first janitor of the school. He began his service when school was opened and continued until 1918. Mr. Lewis Smith took over the position then and continued until 1936. Lee A. Smith succeeded his father in the position.

Pickaway Township School has always been endeared in the hearts of those who attended it. The school has been a sweet memory to those who have graduated from it and something to look forward to by those who yet must complete its course.

PURPOSE OF THE SCHOOL

It shall be the purpose of the Pickaway High School, to provide the facilities by which students attending may be better fitted for the democratic way of life.

Teachers and administrators shall be responsible to provide a school program which seeks to develop students to think for themselves and solve their own problems.

Students must learn to live cooperatively with others. They must learn to deal intelligently with problems of individual and social importance. They should seek to discover and cultivate a variety of personal interests, and, with the guidance of their teachers, apply them to improve their position in society.

It will be the purpose of the school to further study its needs and to continually improve its methods, that it may best serve its purpose in the community.

LOYALTY

LOYALTY is faithfulness in any of the relationships of life that might imply trust. Loyalty is simply "sticking by a fellow in time of need." Doing your share toward making your classroom and your home happier and being loyal to your country's laws. Applied to the school, we can get this loyalty only by making ourselves feel that the school is ours. A person is loyal to the school who:

- 1.--Takes great pride in the appearance of halls, rooms, building, and lawn.
- 2.--Takes vital interest in questions brought before the school.
- 3.--Is willing to follow the decisions of the majority.
- 4.--Is ready to do all he can to make his school better and even greater.
- 5.--Is courteous at all times to visitors, faculty, student body, and class officers.
- 6 .-- Always stands for justice.

CURRICULM

It is no reflection on anyone's intelligence that he does not go to college or does not succeed in college. There are many kinds of intelligence. The college kind is the ability to work with books. Another is the power to create things artistic in music, paintings, drawings, or dramatics. Still another is the technical inventiveness with machines, electrical apparatus, airplanes, and the like. Each of these types of intelligence, and many others, are necessary and important. The world could not run without all of the many varieties of abilities that people possess.

You should have some objective as to your life's work, and plan your course accordingly. Do not take a subject because you think it to be easy, or because you think that teacher to be easy. Every student should ask himself, "What are my interests and outstanding abilities?" When you have answered this question, consulted your parents, and school advisor, you should select the course best suited to you. Studies in this high school are largely divided into three groups, namely: (1) academic or gereral, (2) commercial or business, (3) vocational. The gereral course includes the required subjects, languages, sciences, and mathematics. The business course includes work in the commercial field, with such courses as Business English, bookkeeping, shorthand, typing, etc. Agriculture should be classed as vocational, while home economics should be thought of as a course where certain principles of homemaking, personal and social relationships are considered, and should be taken by a large number of girls, regardless of what other courses they may be taking.

If you plan to go to college, your course should be planned with much care. You should not fail to take Latin, geometry, and possibly physics. Advanced mathematics would also strengthen your course for some college courses. You should consult an advisor to help you plan your college preparatory course.

The normal load to carry is four units, with music and physical education in addition. You will not be permitted to take more unless your past record shows that you are the to carry it. An average of "B" will be necessary. The core than ½ unit may be earned in typing in any year. I limited number of students may take typing in addition to the other four units carried.

Each year when registering, a careful check should be made upon all credits earned in the past, in order that the student shall have the required number when entering the senior year,

Upon graduation from high school you must have earned 16 units in addition to those obtained by music and physical education. These must contain two majors of three units each, and two minors of two units each. Also included in the 16 units must be one unit of science, which may either be General Science or Biology, and one unit of mathematics, preferably algebra.

Courses in the following Curriculum indicated with a capital letter "R" are required while those indicated with a capital letter "R" are elective.

"There is no substitute for character--no substitute for honesty--no substitute for work. This nation cannot legislate them into its Citizenship; each of us must gain them for himself."

GOOD CITIZENSHIP

Citizenship in a country or state means membership. One who pledges allegiance to the organization, to uphold its principles, laws and regulations is in return entitled to enjoy certain rights and privileges of citizenship. To make the nation or state strong, all citizens must cooperatively work together for a common purpose. Laws are passed for the protection of the rights of all concerned.

Citizenship applied to school is much the same as when applied to a state. The school is operated for the benefit of all its students or citizens. It is assumed that all students wish to be good school citizens and to become valuable members of Pickaway school. Below are listed several suggestions for helping you to do this.

Cooperation-Before any organization, be it a nation, a factory, or a school, can operate effeciently there must be harmony of purpose and all members must cooperate to bring about the desired result. In the operation of a school, students should willingly cooperate with teachers and officials to make for the best possible educational opportunities.

Attitudes—Attitude is a frame of mind. Some people have good attitudes, which aid them in their work, while others have attitudes which prove detrimental to their success. If you are to be a good school citizen and enjoy your school experiences, you should cultivate the proper attitudes. You should be optimistic. Try to be openminded. If some regulation displeases you, try to see the other side by placing yourself open to the argument. We should cultivate such cheerful and happy attitudes in approaching our school work, that by our willingness, others may be pleased and our outlook on life may be pleasant. Remember nobody likes a grouch or a knocker.

Good Sportsmanship--A good sportsman plays fair. He does not cheat, but plays the game hard according to the rules. He treats his opponents with respect. He plays for the success of the team, and not for personal glory. If the team loses, he does not hunt excuses or blame the referee, but instead respects the superiority of the other team. In all school work, in business, or in any undertaking, good sportsmanship should be our aim. It will bring us success. Ask yourself, "Am I a good sportsman? Do I always play fair in my school work and in competitive sports?"

Respect for Property--It is always easy to deface or mar school property. There are few times when this is done intentionaly, but rather it is done carelessly or without thinking. We have a nice building and good equipment. It is made possible at public expense. Let us as students respect those who have made it possible, by the proper use of it. Remember others will be using the building after we leave it. Let's leave it in as good condition as we found it. A good school citizen respects public property and appreciates the opportunity of using it for his benefit.

Respect for Others--Listen courteously to the advice of teachers, principal, and superintendent. They are probably better informed than you are about the subjects under discussion, although it may be difficult for you to realize it at the time. Remember you, too, must live and learn.

Recognize and admire the good qualities of your classmates, teachers, or friends. There is some good in every one.

Love and respect the members of your own family. Your parents are more deeply interested in you than anyone else.

Never intentionaly say anything that will injure the feelings of others.

A good school citizen is courteous and always respects the rights of others.

Self Respect -- A good school citizen should:

(1) Keep clean and attractive.

(2) Endeavor to get proper sleep, food, and exercise for good health.

(3) Dress appropriately for school.

(4) Be sensible in use of cosmetics. Natural-charm is desired by most.

(5) Avoid forming harmful habits. Have the courage to say "no".

Manners -- "Life is not so short, but there is always time enough for courtesy." -- Emerson.

Classroom Manners

(1) Punctuality -- be prompt to the classroom.

(2) Be orderly even if the teacher is not in the room.

- (3) Come prepared for class work, with pencil sharpened, paper and other necessary materials.
- (4) When speaking before the class, sit or stand erect, and speak distinctly.

(5) Refrain from chewing gum in the classroom.

(6) Be considerate -- never laugh at another's mistakes.

(7) Wait patiently for your turn.

(8) Critize the work of others courteously, and accept the same from them.

(9) Never rush out when class bell rings. Often the teacher needs time to finish a remark. Wait for her word to leave.

Mannors in the Halls

(1) Pass through the halls quietly and quickly.

(2) Refrain from visiting during change of classes.

(3) Refrain from throwing apple cores, candy wrappers, etc. in the hallways.

(4) Speak quietly in halls.

(5) Avoid using hallways for noon hour visits.

Manners in Assembly

(1) Be there on time and give prompt attention.

(2) Avoid talking or doing anything to disturb those about you.

- (3) If the program displeases, you do not show your displeasure. You may be on the program sometime.
- (4) Join in program when you are asked to do so.

(5) Applaud properly.

(6) Wait for a dismissal signal by someone in authority and be orderly in your exit.

School Parties, Etc.

(1) Remember that each school function must be supervised by a class sponsor.

(2) See to it that chaperons are properly treated. Greet them courteously and treat them with respect.

(3) Remember that at parties you are either a host or guest. Remember your social duties.

SCHOOL SPIRIT

There is something about us that makes us want to boost our school. We wish to see our team win. We wish to see our band perform. We wish to see our scholars win. We are proud of our school, our students, and our teachers. "School spirit?" Yes, let it run high. Boost your school at every opportunity. "Why not?" We have a good school. We support many activities. Be on hand for any help you are able to give at any time. Show your school spirit by cooperation in all things and by actively participating in the activities of the school. Boost Pickaway High. Help keep it at its best.

SCHOLARSHIP

The primary purpose of a modern high school is to provide the proper opportunities and environment for the best development of its students. There are many phases of school life. The most important is attainment of a certain degree of information needed for better understandings. A student should pursue the work of his studies in a diligent manner and strive to gain all that is possible from the course.

Attainment of a high degree of scholarship in academic subjects, and not entering into the other activities of the school would not provide the best education. For your best development, and to make your experiences more enriched, you should take part in some of the extra-curricular activities of our school. Splendid opportunities are afforded at Pickaway for development in instrumental and vocal music, journalism, dramatics, and athletics.

"TO EACH IS GIVEN A BAG OF TOOLS,
A SHAPELESS MASS AND A BOOK OF RULES,
AND EACH MUST FASHION ERE LIFE IS FLOWN,
A STUMBLING BLOCK OR A STEPPING STONE.

ISN'T IT STRANGE THAT PRINCES AND KINGS, AND CLOWNS THAT CAPER IN SAWDUST RINGS AND COMMON FOLK LIKE YOU AND ME, ARE BUILDERS OF ETERNITY?"

SCHOOL ACTIVITIES

Students in Pickaway High School are privileged to enter into a number of activities which are either sponsored, or encouraged by the school.

These activities are intended to furnish both instructional and social advantages to students participating. Parties and social events connected with each activity must be properly planned under the direction of the activity sponsor.

While students are encouraged to become interested in some of the activities, care must be taken that a student does not enter so many that he will be unable to give sufficient time to his classroom work. Students carrying several activities will find it necessary to prepare many lessons outside of school time.

Listed below are several activities which the school now encourages, or plans to do so in the near future. Students interested in any activity not now offered should make known their desires at the office.

FINANCIAL ACCOUNTING

All funds derived from any school activity must be properly accounted for. The funds will be promptly deposited in the "Pickaway Township School Activities Fund" account. There will be individual accounts kept of each activity. Any member of a class or an activity, which has money deposited in the fund may examine the records and determine the standing of the activity at any time. In addition, there will be posted at various intervals the standing of all funds.

The system used by our school is one which is used in the leading high schools of the state. It combines the advantages of conducting the activities on a business basis and leaves a permanent record in the school, of all funds.

ATTENDANCE

No single thing does more to insure the success of a student than perfect attendance. Likewise failure is often due to irregular attendance. The student who wishes to make the most of his educational experiences will be on hand at every class session.

There are times, such as for personal illness, when a student must be absent from school. In cases of this nature the student will be presented an excuse blank for the signature of parent and checking of reason. These excuses will be kept on file in the office. If a student is needed at home for work, he may be excused for a period, not to exceed 15 days during the school term. If this excuse is desired the student should apply at the office for a special excuse, giving him this privilege.

Any time missed from school should be promptly made up. The student should inquire of the teacher as to material missed, upon his return to school and proceed to complete his assignment.

SIX-SIX ORGANIZATION

Upon recommendation of the State Department of Education, the administration has seen fit to organize the school on the six-six plan. Under this plan the first six grades will make up the elementary school and the high school will include grades seven to twelve.

Under this plan of organization there is no break between the eighth year and freshman year in high school, as formerly. The plan further provides for the instruction of the seventh and eighth years to be done by better qualified teachers. All teachers will hold college degrees and will be teaching in their major fields of preparation.

JANET GRISSOM RATED "SUPERIOR" WITH PROJECT

Janet Grissom received a superior rating at the State Science Day April 17. Her project was concerned with the healthy heart and the coronary thrombosis. The became interested in the heart attack President Eisenhower suffered and made it, the coronary thrombosis, her project.

After much research, she drew several beautiful and colerful diagrams showing the healthy heart and a heart as it looks during a heart attack. From there Janet went on to make a model heart, a little larger than actual size. All this she combined in a most outstanding way.

Of the work she did, Janet says, "It was a lot of work, as is anything worthwhile. Believe me, it was worth all the work I did."

Three other local Science (Qub members, having received superior in the district, exhibited projects at the state affair. All three received excellent ratings. They are Jerry Patrick, "Conservation"; Anne Smith, "The Simple Laboratory Preparation of Lucite"; and Nancy Wilson, a research paper entitled, "Memory".

GRADES WATCH FOR SIGNS OF SPRING

The first grade has three new pulls. They are Bonnie Davis and Larry Smith from Circleville and David Pennington from Westerville. This makes an enrollment of the boys and to girls.

Things of interest in the first grade now are:

Watching flower and vegetable seeds sprout and grow; Watching the tiny Praying Mantis hatch. Last fall the pupils watched a mother Mantis make a cocoon;

A large Polyphemus Moth came out of its occoon. It was in their Terrarium; A chemical garden.

LATIN CLUB IS BUSY WITH ACTIVITIES

by Norman Wilson The Latin Club has had a busy month with its State Junior Classical League and its Roman Banquet.

Twenty new members of the club went to the State J. C. L. Convention, which was held at the Onio State University's Mershon Auditorium April 9. It conmisted of workshops, a banquet, and a business meeting with election of state officers.

Saturday, April 118, at 0:30 p. m., twenty-four embers attended the annual oman Banquet at Unioto chool. At this banquet, hich was made as nearly like an original Roman festival as was possible, he members dressed in loges just as the Romans aid. During the banquet glaves entered and were rdered to do anything the others desired, from rolling apples with their noses to eating sardines. After the banquet a program was held, in which our club resented a skit of the story of "Pyrams and This-Sen. Participants in the wit were Sharon Sharrett, inisbe; Norman Wilson, Tramus; Ned Musselman, 11; Jim Drumm, the Bear; nd Nathan Wilson, Joe coeller, Gene Dean, and ruce Wilson, Trees.

All the Latin Club members are hoping for a Fickway County J. C. L. Club in the near future.

SYNOPSIS

TIME-Act I and III, at present; Act II, about 1624. ACT I—House party on banks of the Hudson. Evening. ACT II, Scene 1—Street in front of Burgomaster's house, Leydenkirk, Holland. Afternoon and Evening. Scene 2-A pirate rendez-

ACT III-Same as Act I.

Between Acts I and II, 300 years are supposed to recede. Between Acts II and III, 300 years are supposed to elapse.

STORY OF THE PLAY

A house party is given by Mr. and Mrs. Van Der Meer at their estate on the Hudson. A necromancer from India is engaged by the hostess to put the whole gathering of guests asleep at one time. By common consent they wish to dream themselves back in Holland three hundred years before. The necromancer casts a spell over the entire company, during which he burns incense and sings a weird chant.

Act II opens with the same characters, transferred to Leydenkirk, Holland, in the year 1624. It is built around the character of Jaqueline, dashing and flittstipus girl. One day after a storm she was found Act in opens with the same characters, transferred to Leyenkirk, Holland, in the year 1624. It is built around the character of Jaqueline, a dashing and flirtatious girl. One day after a storm she was found unconsc ous by the burgomaster lying on the beach and was taken into his home. Comic and dramatic situations follow each other rapidly during these two scenes. The first scene opens with the birthday celebration in honor of the burgomaster. A sailor, Schmidt, warns the burgomaster and Peter, prefect of police, that a brigantine which an echored in the harbor the night before is a pirate ship, believed to be commanded by the notorious Captain La Rue, pirate chief. The burgomaster and Peter plan a clever trap for the pirates. Jaqueline and Willberg, the burgomaster's sectarry, traitorously assist the pirates who succeed in breaking into the burgomaster's house, carrying off the chest supposed to contain the town funds in gold and even making off with the burgomaster's family as prisoners.

At the pirate's rendezvous, scene 2, a comic incident occurs, when the pirates open the chest to count the gold, and find the burgomaster inside. Things might have gone quite badly with him, but for the timely arrival of the police who overcome the pirates. Jaqueline is found to be the pirate chief's daughter. On condition that they will never set foot on Dutch soil again, and will depart to a distant island, they are to go free.

foot on Dutch soil again, and will depart to a distant island, they are

A very happy love scene is depicted by Elsie and Peter, Another A very happy love scene is depicted by Elsie and Peter. Another bright love episode is enacted by Hans and Katrinka, the servants, wherein a quaint wooden shoe dance takes place in the moonlight.

Three pirate spies, Mate, Dub and Gub develop a very comic situation around the name of the pirate flag known as the "Jolly Roger."
The burgomaster and pirate chief are the centers of much comedy also.

In Act III the necromancer removes his spell and the last stage of the house party reveals all in their true character.

The Final Chapter

The end for the majestic Pickaway Township school began on September 26, 2023 and finished on October 3, 2023 with the demolition of both the high school and elementary buildings. Thus ended the 110 year history of the school that once stood along Kingston Pike. The company in charge of the demotion was the Watson General Contracting firm out of Newark, Ohio. The company did very professional work on this project.

Many fond memories still linger even though the school is no longer there. The first building to go was the high school building. David Beavers, along with a few others, provided photos of the demolition on each day of the process. The drone photos were taken by Tim Ward. The following pages show each day of the demolition.

The high school building and connector building was the first to go.

Tribute to Miss Louise Stuckey

The following pages are taken from the scrapbook of Miss Louise Stuckey who not only attended Pickaway as a student but also taught at the school as a third grade teachers for several years. Her scrapbook contained photos of many of her students as well as the speech she gave on the video celebrating the 75th anniversary of the school. Her history of the Pickaway Township School appears earlier in this book.

Also included in her scrapbook were several graduation bulletins from the 1940s to the early 1960s. These bulletins give additional information about student life at the school.

On the top left is a Pickaway Township School 1935 graduation photo of Miss Stukey while the photo on the top right shows her early in her career as a third grade teacher.

The photo on the right shows her third grade students dancing around a maypole on the first of May in 1954. This is one custom that has disappeared in today's society and schools.

75th Anniversary Speech

I am Louise Stuckey. I was a pupil at Pickaway School beginning in the first grade in September 1923. My first grade teacher was Pearl Ringwald who rode the Scioto Valley Traction from Chillicothe to a little station (Hoover) across the field from Pickaway School. She walked from there to the school. I continued my elementary and high school education, graduating in May 1935.

The faculty during those years was superintendent Benjamin L. Hanselman, A. F. Cameron, Lester Seitz and M. C. Warren. Teachers: Misses Ringwald, McKenzie, Pierce, Reichelderfer, Wood, Shaner, McNeal, Johnson, Wertman, Patterson, Radcliff, Brand, and Mrs. Althaus, Seitz, Warren, Carpenter, Myers, and Fries.

I rode a bus to school. They were quite different than those of today. They were trucks not equipped with heaters for cold weather. We had to dress warmly. In 1930 a new modern fleet of buses were purchased.

I don't recall the length of the school day, supposedly it was 6-6 % hours. The school year began in September after Labor Day and ended the latter part of May.

We sat in stationary seats arranged in rows. We needed permission to leave the room or to speak in class. Our day began with the pledge to the flag, sometimes a short Bible reading, and a prayer. When dismissed, the class went in double lines. Sometimes when going to the bus in the afternoon we marched to music.

Respect, citizenship, and sportsmanship were taught. At all times we were to show respect to teachers, classmates, and school property. Our hallways were quiet. Each classroom teacher handled problems. The superintendent was available if needed.

Subjects taught in grades one through eight were reading, arithmetic, English, history, geography, handwriting, spelling, health, music, and art.

In high school we chose our own course of study. I had English, history, algebra, general science, biology, Latin, French, bookkeeping, typing, shorthand, physical education and music. In our typing classes we were assigned a teacher to do her typing when needed. Also, I helped with the school paper. Mr. Althaus had a print shop.

Our textbooks and a few workbooks were supplied by the Board of Education as well as writing paper and a new pencil beginning each six weeks. We had a library supplied by a gift from the will of Nelson Hitler, a former resident.

Games:

Our recess activities consisted of various games, tag, Red Rover, jumping rope, trapeze, swings, teeter boards, baseball, and basketball.

The high school had a physical education program consisting of games, baseball, basketball, volleyball, track, etc.

Lunch:

In my early grade school years, I brought my lunch from home in a lunch pail. A small cafeteria was begun a year or so before 1927. An addition to the building was completed then and was equipped with a bigger cafeteria. Some continued bringing lunches from home to eat in the classroom. It was quiet and we had time to eat.

Clothes:

Our clothes were mainly of the period, girls wore dresses, skirts, sweaters, socks or hose, and oxfords. Boys in grade school wore knee pants and shirts, sweaters, shoes and socks. High school boys wore trousers, shirts, sweaters, socks and shoes.

Special Activities:

In elementary school we had a Better Citizens' Club, and art and music activities. In high school there were local and county oratorical contests.

In the music department three music professors came from Capital University to give instrumental lessons once a week which led to the beginning of an orchestra.

Boys participated in FFA. There were 4-H clubs for both boys and girls, also sports, basketball, baseball, volleyball, and track. Since we lived in a mostly agricultural community, we had to help on the farm before and after school hours. All the activities were at school and church. We had no extra-curricular activities after school other than basketball practice and senior play practice.

Special projects included operettas at Christmas for the elementary an alternating operetta or spring concert in high school. Lee Smith, one of the graduates, was quite an artist who painted the scenery for all the operettas. There was also a County Music Festival.

Lee Smith

In my junior year I was one of seven others selected to sing in the All-State Rural High School Chorus in Columbus which was composed of 650 voices from 1,000 applicants. 154 schools from 55 counties participated. We sang for the program of the Ohio Education Association meeting and also made a radio broadcast. This was a great experience. We had senior class plays in the spring.

Classes did not take field trips. Senior classes each fall went to Baker Art Gallery in Columbus to have their pictures taken. The remainder of the day was spent visiting places of interest, such as the Statehouse, the Blind School, the Mental Institutions, the Dispatch Building, the AIU Tower (now the Lincoln-Leveque), and the Historical Museum, accompanied by their history teacher, Mildred Wertman.

There was a period of five years after my high school graduation before I came as a teacher to Pickaway and began teaching third grade. That was in September of 1940. I remained in that classroom for 35 years before I retired in 1975. It was an enjoyable and rewarding challenge, also a pleasant place to be.

The only requirements asked of me as a new teacher were to live up to good moral conduct, try to attend all or most of the school functions, and be regular in attendance.

I taught only grade 3. My average enrollment was 33 pupils. A few years I had 44 to 49 pupils. My beginning few years there were only 15 to 22 pupils. Throughout the 35 years, I taught over 1,100 pupils.

Our school day was 5 % to 6 hours. After the high school moved in 1960 to Logan Elm, the new centralized building, the elementary day was shortened because the bus schedules changed.

Rules:

Good citizenship, respect for teachers, elders, classmates, and school property were taught. Be kind and helpful to one another, and be a good sport. It was one of my pet peeves that we didn't leave our classroom in the afternoon littered or disarranged. We were in line to come from the playground or to dismiss from the classroom to the bus. Leaving the room was by permission. We had a small classroom library which the pupils were free to use.

Subjects Taught:

I taught reading, English, arithmetic, spelling, handwriting, science, social studies, and art until we had an art instructor in the district.

Materials:

The board of education provided us with basic texts, workbooks, library books, filmstrips, tape recorders, and art supplies. I also added books to the room library. The county bookmobile also came with additional library books.

Discipline:

There were problems occasionally that I took care of, but the superintendent or principal was available when needed. Talking and reasoning with the child helped in most cases. Sometimes a task to perform (cleaning the room, hall or schoolyard) would work. Missing playtime or being given an extra assignment was often used. In a few cases the paddle was used.

Games:

There were items on the playground such as the slide, swings, merry-go-round, teeter-totter, parallel bars, baseball, basketball, football, soccer, jumping ropes, and various games as tag, red-rover, fox and geese, etc.

Lunch:

When I first began teaching, only those who bought lunches went to the cafeteria. Those with lunches from home ate in the classroom. After the high school and 7th and 8th grades moved, we all went to the cafeteria. Our time was shortened and we had to eat fast.

Clothes:

Girls wore dresses, sweaters, slacks, ankle socks, oxfords or slippers. Boys wore shirts (striped or plaids), sweaters, trousers, or jeans. Some wore bib overalls, shoes, or tennis shoes.

Term:

Before the 7th, 8th, and high school moved, school began after Labor Day and ended the last of May. After that move, school began the last part of August and ended the first week of June.

Special activities:

Assembly programs—each grade was responsible for a program. One memorable one was a circus by grades 1, 2, 3. Operettas were sometimes at Christmas or in the spring. We had Arbor Day programs. We had a couple of May Day Programs. Some special days Room Mothers had parties. There was a special trip to Columbus Zoo for those who had perfect attendance for the year. We went to the high school to see the Art Show or plays done by the high school students.

Each spring we had a science project planting either flower or tomato seeds so that each child had a plant for their mother for Mother's Day. We had some Arbor Day Programs for parents and planted some trees.

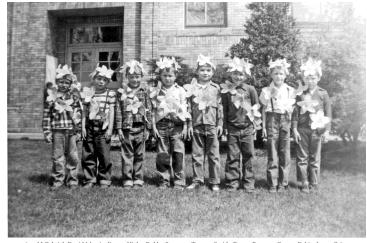

We wrote and produced an environmental play along with an art project.

One highlight of my teaching was my team-teaching project. I had a beginning teacher to work with me for four years. Enrollment was large, and no extra room was available to divide the class; thus, I proposed this idea to have help. We used three panels to roll between two rows of desks to divide the room. We had some problems, but for the most part it was a worthwhile and pleasant experience.

Teaching was interesting, challenging, and rewarding. I know that many of my pupils have extended their education beyond high school. Some have become teachers, principals, college professors, engineers, nurses, dentists, doctors, secretaries, and beauticians. Fifteen are at the present time teaching in the Logan Elm School District. Two of those are father and son. Through the span of 35 years I have worked with many teachers under the leadership of Carl Burger, John Hardin, Robert Seward, Alfred Gabriel, and John Henn.

In my 47 years as a pupil and a teacher at Pickaway School, many changes have been made. I have seen an agricultural area being taken over by industry and housing developments making for larger enrollments and thus consolidating with other schools to become the Logan Elm School District.

Had I taught three more years I would have spent 50 years at Pickaway. That shows you Pickaway School is a good place to be.
